The Springfield Coal Depth Map Series, which includes the McLean County map, is a valuable resource for understanding the coal deposits in the area. The map provides detailed information about the depth and location of coal seams, which is crucial for mining and geological studies. The data presented is based on extensive surveys and is maintained by the Illinois State Geological Survey. This map is available as a PDF download, and it includes a comprehensive data layer that can be queried for more detailed information. For more detailed information, including the reference notes and sources, refer to the full report available online.
